We're living in an amazing time. It's a time of awakening. Yet, with awakening comes more awareness in the many arenas of human life: personal, social, business, political, economical, scientific, religious, spiritual, and, perhaps, often elusively, psychic. Information about almost anything we might wish to learn about is at our fingertips. Daily, most of us are deluged by more information than we can easily process. Leisurely reading a newspaper while sipping on the perfect cup of tea seems almost a luxury of a bygone era. RSS feeds deliver a steady stream of tailor-made news items, social events, blogs, podcasts, videos, and posts. And, that's just about the world out there and what everyone else is doing.

What about your own personal life? How do you take care of your health, family, relationships, career, finances, and everything else in the line of fire of texts, messages, tweets, emails, social media postings, and video chats? Then, there are the never-ending daily menu of choices you have to make. Some are no-brainers, but even what used to be a simple personal preference choice like "paper or plastic?" at the supermarket check-out now come with serious ecological and political considerations. If even making simple daily life choices are requiring you to conduct extensive research, how do you make life-changing major decisions?

Yes, life in this world is getting more challenging by the day. Some days it might even feel like if you weren't born knowing how to use an iPad, you aren't going to make it. Yet, life is still life. The only thing that's different is how we're living it in this world. And, we're all much more aware on so many more levels than ever before.

It's been said many times that life is a journey. That means each of us is going from wherever we are to wherever we need to get to. The only way we're going to get there is by learning to navigate through all of life's challenges. And, the only thing that stops us from doing that from time to time is becoming afraid of taking our next step or letting doubt stop us from doing what we need to do next.

So, I thought I'd offer a special seminar weekend in Chicago to address and explore those two major aspects of living life so that you can each live the life that you are truly meant to live - a joyous one, a fulfilling, purpose-inspired life.

In Saturday's all-day seminar, When In Doubt, Follow Your Heart: *How to Use Intuition to Take Your Next Step, I'll address what doubt is and how to get beyond it whenever it comes into your mind. You can choose to stay hostage to doubts or you can choose to follow your heart and take your next step. The Chinese sage Lao-Tzu said that the journey of a thousand miles begins with one step. That beginning one step to the journey of life is always your next step wherever you may be on that trek. Following the compass of your heart and using your intuitive knowing, are the keys to always being able to take that first, next step, wherever you are headed. You'll learn simple, yet powerful psychic tools to help you let go of doubts, have certainty in your intuitive knowingness, and find courage to take your next step in life, wherever that may lead you. You'll learn the all-important secret of how to use a single moment of clarity and certainty to guide you through the jungle of doubts and invalidation that may follow. It's time to enjoy life to its fullest.

Then, on Sunday, in Navigating Life's Challenges: *Using Imagination & Intuition to Open New Doors, we'll delve into the limitlessly creative process of using imagination and intuition to open new byways, while navigating through the often turbulent seas of life. You'll learn how to start living more of the miracle of your life as spirit. You'll discover how to discern between those problems you face in life that are not yours to solve from tackling your true creative challenges from which you are here to learn your soul lessons. You'll also learn the tools needed to make all of that not only doable, but enjoyable. Come learn to make each of life's seeming challenges your creative opportunity as a soul to appreciate and celebrate. You'll discover that life is meant to be enjoyed!
